

LESSON 5

The Aphel Stem: Divine Action & Causative Verbs

ܐܦܗܠ

ʾAPHEL

SECTION 1: REVIEW OF LESSONS 1–4

Quick Summary

Before diving into the Aphel stem, let's review the foundational material from the first four lessons:

- Lesson 0: The Estrangela alphabet, letter order, and the non-joining letters.
- Lesson 1: The noun system (gender, number, and the absolute, construct, and emphatic states), independent pronouns, verbless clauses, and the particles d- (relative/possessive) and l- (to/for, direct object).
- Lesson 2: The Peal stem and its active participle. With enclitic pronouns, the participle forms the narrative present (kāteb-nā, “I am writing”).
- Lesson 3: The Peal perfect (suffix conjugation) of ܬܒܬ (k-t-b, ‘write’), V-S-O narrative word order, and the conjunction w-.
- Lesson 4: Pronominal suffixes on nouns and prepositions, and the idiom ʾit l- for “to have”.

5-Question Warm-Up Drill

Answer these questions using what you've learned. Answers are in Section 9.

1. ܬܒܬ — Give the 3rd m.sg. Peal perfect and its meaning.
2. What are the three states of the Syriac noun? Give an example of each.
3. Translate: ܗܘ ܪܒܒܐ ܗܘ (hū rabbā hū)
4. What does the Peal active participle of ܐܠܬ (ʾ-z-l, ‘go’) look like, m.sg.?
5. Identify the root and stem of the form ܬܒܬܐ (ketbat)

SECTION 2: THE DERIVED STEMS — OVERVIEW

One of the most powerful features of Semitic languages — shared by Syriac, Hebrew, and Arabic — is the system of derived verbal stems. A single three-consonant root can generate multiple verbs with systematically related meanings, simply by modifying the vowel pattern and/or adding prefixes or affixes.

This is very different from Greek or Latin, where related meanings usually require entirely different words. In Syriac, once you know a root, you already know the building blocks of an entire semantic family.

The Three Major Active Stems

Stem Name	Formation Pattern	Basic Meaning Shift	Example
Peal	Basic vowel pattern	Basic action / state	ܟܬܒ — katab , ‘he wrote’
Paael	Middle root letter doubled	Intensive / Factitive	ܩܕܕܫ — qaddaš , ‘he sanctified’
Aphel	’a- prefix added	Causative	ܐܚܝ — ’ahyī , ‘he caused to live’

Cross-Linguistic Comparison

For those coming from Hebrew or Arabic, these correspondences will look familiar:

Syriac	Peal	Paael	Aphel
Hebrew	Qal	Piel	Hiphil
Arabic	Form I	Form II	Form IV
Function	Basic	Intensive/Factitive	Causative

For learners with a Greek background: Greek uses voice (active, middle, passive) and aspect to express some of these distinctions, but there is no exact parallel to the Semitic derived stem system. The Greek causative construction (e.g., ποιεῖν + infinitive) expresses what the Aphel does morphologically. Latin similarly uses circumlocutions (facere + infinitive) or prefix verbs for some causative senses.

SECTION 3: THE APHEL STEM

Core Meaning: Causative

The Aphel stem expresses causative action — ‘to cause X to happen’ or ‘to make X do Y.’ In theological language, this is the stem of divine action: God ’ahyī (gave life), God ’aglī (revealed), God ’aqreb (brought near).

Formation

- Perfect: 'a- prefix + CeCC pattern (same person suffixes as Peal perfect)
- Participle: m- prefix + CaCC-eC pattern (cf. Peal participle)

Comparison with Other Languages

- Hebrew Hiphil: prefix הִ/הֵ (hi-/he-) added to the root. E.g., ḥāyāh (live) → heḥēyāh (give life); qārāb (draw near) → hiqrīb (bring near/offer). The structural parallel to Syriac Aphel is very close.
- Arabic Form IV: 'a- prefix + CaCaCa → 'aCCaCa. E.g., ḥaraja (go out) → 'aḥraja (bring out); qāraba (approach) → 'aqraba (bring near). The Syriac Aphel prefix 'a- is cognate with Arabic Form IV.
- Greek/Latin: No direct morphological equivalent. Greek uses prefix verbs (e.g., ζωοποιεῖν, 'to give life') or constructions with ποιεῖν + inf. Latin uses facere + infinitive or prefix verbs.

Aphel Examples: Peal → Aphel

Peal (Syr)	Root	Peal Meaning	Aphel (Syr)	Aphel Translit	Aphel Meaning
ܣܪ ܗ-ܝ-ܝ'ܬ	o live' ܣܪ	ܣ * 'aḥyī (Peal)	* 'to give lif	e,	save'
ܩܪ ܩ-ܪ-ܒ'	to draw ܩܪ	ܩܪ * 'aqr near' (Peal)	ܐܒ * 'to bring ne	ar,	offer'
ܩܪ ܢ-ܦ-ܩ	'to go	ܩܪ * 'a out' (Peal)	ܩܩ * 'to bring	out,	produce'
ܩܪ ܢ-ܦ-ܠ'ܬ	o fall' ܩܪ	ܩ * 'appe (Peal)	ܐܠ * 'to cause to f	all,	throw down'

The 'Alap-Lamed-Peh Root ('-l-p) in the Aphel

The root ܐܠܦ ('-l-p) means 'learn' in the Peal stem. In the Aphel, it means 'to teach' — that is, 'to cause someone to learn.' This root will be used for all paradigm tables in Sections 4–5.

SECTION 4: APHEL PERFECT PARADIGM

Root: 'l-p | Stem: Aphel | Meaning: 'to teach'

אָפֿֿל Perfect — Full Conjugation

Person	Estrangela	Transliteration	Translation
3 m.sg.	אָלפּ 'alep	he ta	ught
3 f.sg.	אַלפּ * 'allpa	t* she	taught
2 m.sg.	אַלפּ * 'alept	* you (m.sg	.) taught
2 f.sg.	אַלפּ * 'alepti	* you (f.sg	.) taught
1 c.sg.	אַלפּ * 'allpe	t* I t	aught
3 m.pl.	אַלפּ * 'allpū	* they (m	.) taught
3 f.pl.	אַלפּ * 'allpī	* they (f	.) taught
2 m.pl.	אַלפּ * 'aleptū	n* you (m.pl	.) taught
2 f.pl.	אַלפּ * 'alepti	n* you (f.pl	.) taught
1 c.pl.	אַלפּ * 'allpe	n* we t	aught

Formation Notes:

- Prefix: 'a- added before the root (3 m.sg.: 'alep)
- Root-internal vowel: e vowel between R2 and R3 in 3 m.sg.
- Suffixes: Identical to Peal perfect suffixes (-at, -t, -ti, -et, -ū, -ī, -tūn, -tin, -n)
- Note on gutturals: When R1 is Alaph ('), assimilation or lengthening may occur in some forms

Comparison: Hebrew Hiphil Perfect

The Hebrew Hiphil perfect is structurally parallel to the Syriac Aphel perfect, with a causative prefix (𐤀- hi-/𐤁- he-) and essentially the same suffix set:

Person	Hebrew (Hiphil)	Transliteration	Translation
3 m.sg.	אִמַּן	he 'ēmīn	he believed (H. Hiphil of ' -m-n)
3 f.sg.	אִמַּנָּה	he 'ēmīnāh	she believed
1 c.sg.	אִמַּנְתִּי	he 'ēmantī	I believed
3 m.pl.	אִמַּנּוּ	he 'ēmīnū	they believed

Comparison: Arabic Form IV Perfect

Arabic Form IV (' aCCaCa) is cognate with the Syriac Aphel. The prefix ' a- and the causative meaning are identical; only the internal vowel pattern differs:

Person	Arabic (Form IV)	Transliteration	Translation
3 m.sg.	أَرْسَلَ	' arsala	he sent (Form IV of r-s-l)
3 f.sg.	أَرْسَلَتْ	' arsalat	she sent
1 c.sg.	أَرْسَلْتُ	' arsaltu	I sent
3 m.pl.	أَرْسَلُوا	' arsalū	they sent

SECTION 5: APHEL PARTICIPLE PARADIGM

Root: ' -l-p | Stem: Aphel | Meaning: 'causing to learn / teaching'

The Aphel active participle expresses ongoing or habitual causative action. It also frequently serves as an adjective. The participle prefix is m- (as in all derived stems).

Form	Estrangela	Transliteration	Translation
m.sg. (active)	ܡܠܦܐ ma 'lep	teaching	(m.sg.)
f.sg. (active)	ܡܠܦܐ ma 'lpā	teaching	(f.sg.)
m.pl. (active)	ܡܠܦܝܢ ma 'lpī	n teaching	(m.pl.)
f.pl. (active)	ܡܠܦܝܢ ma 'lpā	n teaching	(f.pl.)

Formation Notes

- Prefix: m- added before the root (same prefix as Paael and other derived-stem participles)
- Vowel pattern: ma ' - + R2 + vowel + R3 (cf. Peal participle kāteb → Aphel ma 'lep)
- Gender/number suffixes: Same as all Syriac participles: m.sg. (unmarked), f.sg. (-ā), m.pl. (-īn), f.pl. (-ān)

Comparison with Hebrew and Arabic

Hebrew Hiphil participle: prefix מִ/מֵ (ma-/me-). E.g., ma'āmīn (believing/trusting — from 'm-n Hiphil). The m- participle prefix is pan-Semitic.

Arabic Form IV active participle: pattern muCCiC. E.g., mursil (sending/sender — from 'arsala). Note the Arabic Form IV participle has the vowel shift u-i, while Syriac uses a-e.

KEY PATTERN: In all Syriac derived stems, the participle prefix is m-. This is one of the most consistent features of Syriac verbal morphology. If you see a verb beginning with m- that is not a Peal form, suspect a derived-stem participle.

SECTION 10: GRAMMATICAL SUMMARY

THE APHEL STEM — FORMATION RULES

Feature	Rule	Example
Perfect prefix	'a- (Ayin-Alaph) before root	'a + R1 + e + R2 + suffix
Perfect 3 m.sg.	'a + R1R2eR3 (no suffix)	'alep, 'aḥyī, 'aqreb
Suffix set	Same as Peal perfect	-at, -t, -ti, -et, -ū, -ī, -tūn, -tin, -n
Participle prefix	m- before root	m + ' + R2 + e + R3
Participle 3 m.sg.	ma ' + R2eR3	ma 'lep
Participle suffixes	Same as all participles	-ā (f.sg.), -īn (m.pl.), -ān (f.pl.)
Core meaning	Causative	'to cause X to happen' / 'to make X do Y'

Meaning Pattern

PEAL (basic) + 'a- prefix = APHEL (causative) 'to X' → 'to cause to X' / 'to make X happen' ḥ-y-y: live → 'aḥyī: give life/save | q-r-b: draw near → 'aqreb: bring near | n-p-q: go out → 'appeq: bring out

Comparative Summary: Three Stems

Stem	Meaning	Perfect 3 m.sg.	Participle m.sg.	Translation
Peal	Basic	katab	kāteb	'he wrote' / 'writing'
Paael	Intensive/Factitive	qaddaš	mqaḍdeš	'he sanctified' / 'sanctifying'
Aphel	Causative	'alep	ma 'lep	'he taught' / 'teaching'

Remember: In all three derived stems (Paael, Aphel, Ethpaael, etc.), the active participle always takes a m- prefix. This is your clearest signal that you are reading a derived-stem participle.
